

Maureen Meyer is originally from Bloomingdale, Illinois. She received a BS in Psychology from Loyola University Chicago in 2008. She graduated in May 2011 with a MPH in Epidemiology; her focus area was chronic diseases. As a student, she served on the College of Public Health Student Association Board and the Epidemiology Student Association Board, in addition to completing multiple internships pertaining to physical activity and nutrition. Maureen completed her practicum in Emergency Preparedness at Johnson County Public Health, and continued her work there through a summer internship. She is currently an AmeriCorps Member serving at Johnson County Public Health. Some of her responsibilities include contributing to the Johnson County Obesity Task Force, assisting with Farm to School Farmer Fairs, working on various Safe Routes to School projects, and contributing to the Blue Zones Project.